

Online Course

GNHU 182: English Vocabulary: Classical Roots

Etymology: the study of the historical development of languages and of individual words; from the Greek etumon "literal sense" (from etumos "true") and -logia "study of" (from logos "word")

GNHU 182 explores the Greek and Latin roots of English words we use every day. It will help you:

- Improve your vocabulary: vital for impressing future and current employers!
- Score higher on standardized tests: especially good for those going to Graduate or Professional School!
- Master the terminology of many professional fields including Law and Medicine

What current students are saying:

- "I enjoy this class immensely. I love how the course tells the stories behind the etymology and the history of words and their usage... I find it easier to understand words I have never seen before by analyzing word elements. I hope it is offered again for others to partake in it."
- "I really have enjoyed this course and feel it has increased my vocabulary as well as understanding of etymology."
- "It's interesting to see how and why we have some words in our vocabulary. The class is useful."

GNHU 182 is an Online Course (and thus easy to schedule) and includes:

- Presentations on Blackboard
- Readings
- Exercises, tests and discussion on Blackboard

GNHU 182 works with your General Education and major/minor programs:

- Fulfills General Education Elective Requirement
- Counts toward Classics Major and Minor
- Counts toward Pre-Law Minor and Jurisprudence Major

Winter Term 2010!! Fully online!!

If you have questions, don't hesitate to email the instructor Dr. Prudence Jones:
jonespr@mailmontclair.edu.

For a sample syllabus, visit <https://netdrive.montclair.edu/~jonespr/>